

in this issue

Veteran Instructor Provides Retreat
for Working Women

THE STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW JERSEY
RUTGERS

Veteran Instructor Provides Retreat for Working Women

Claudia Monte

For the past eight years, the Center for Government Services has utilized Claudia Monte's expertise to deliver seminars to construction code enforcement officials, technical assistants, municipal clerks, and government employees. Now, the veteran instructor is expanding her expertise to help women discover their passion and gain direction through her firm's "Working Women's Retreat...Taking Care of You" series. Held at an ocean-front location in New Jersey, the retreats give women time to step back from their busy lives to assess current and future directions.

Monte is principal owner of CAM Consulting Group LLC, a full-service strategic consulting and training firm. She founded the company in 1993 with the goal to assist organizations and their most important resource—people—achieve success.

Monte has been an adjunct instructor for several community colleges in New Jersey, an arbitrator for the Better Business Bureau, and a facilitator of focus groups for the New Jersey Government On-Line initiative. Prior to starting her firm, she held management, sales, training, and marketing positions with Johnson and Johnson, The McGraw-Hill Companies, and Xerox Corporation. She received her degree from Widener University.

CGS is just one of her firm's many clients in the public, private, military, legal, judicial, medical, and education sectors. CAM, a certified small, woman-owned business, provides consulting services to help organizations achieve productive outcomes through strategic planning, needs assessments, focus group and retreat facilitation, and personnel and procedure manuals. In addition, targeted training programs are offered for executive through staff levels in the areas of leadership and management, communication and presentation, ethics and values, customer service and teamwork, self-development, and business writing. The firm also provides business coaches for individuals needing personalized attention.

The "Working Women's Retreat...Taking Care of You" series provides attendees with educational sessions and time for reflection, renewal, and fun. The next retreat will be in October 2006. Additional information can be found at CAM's web site (www.cam4consulting.com). ■